Why Teaching is a Noble Profession?

BY - Prof. Manohar Paatil

Allow me to begin by sharing a quote from the esteemed Dr. APJ Abdul Kalam, a prominent figure known for his presidency in India and his role as the "Missile Man." He articulated, "Teaching is a profoundly noble vocation that molds an individual's character, prowess, and prospects. If I am recalled as a commendable teacher, that would be the ultimate tribute."

Dr. Kalam, celebrated for his scientific contributions and leadership as India's President, held the distinction of being a brilliant scientist. While he could have desired remembrance for his scientific prowess or presidential achievements, he opted to be remembered as a teacher. This preference underscores the profound reverence accorded to educators within our society, as they shape the foundation of our future and the ethical framework of burgeoning intellects.

Dr. APJ Abdul Kalam's quote, "Teaching is a very noble profession that shapes the character, caliber, and future of an individual. If the people remember me as a good teacher, that will be the biggest honor for me," resonates deeply with his values and dedication to education. Let's explore the profound meaning behind this quote:

1. Noble Profession of Teaching:

Dr. Kalam's choice of words emphasizes the nobility of the teaching profession. By calling it "noble," he underscores the moral and ethical significance of shaping young minds. Teachers play a pivotal role in imparting knowledge, values, and life skills that guide students toward becoming responsible and compassionate individuals.

2. Shaping Character and Caliber:

Dr. Kalam recognized that teaching goes beyond conveying academic content. Effective educators influence the character and caliber of their students. Character encompasses values, ethics, and moral principles that guide individuals in their interactions with others and their decisions. Caliber refers to one's abilities, potential, and competence. A dedicated teacher instills both strong character and a sense of purpose, helping students realize their full potential.

3. Nurturing the Future:

The phrase "shapes the future of an individual" highlights the long-term impact of teaching. Educators not only impart subject knowledge but also provide guidance and mentorship that prepare students for their roles as responsible citizens and contributors to society. Teachers have the power to inspire students to pursue meaningful careers and make positive changes in the world.

4. Aspiration for Honor:

Dr. Kalam humbly expressed his desire to be remembered as a good teacher. This aspiration demonstrates his commitment to his students' growth and development. Rather than seeking personal recognition or accolades, he aimed for a legacy built on the positive impact he had on his students' lives.

5. Teaching as the Ultimate Honor:

The statement "the biggest honor for me" showcases Dr. Kalam's deep humility and selflessness. He believed that the true measure of his success lay in the positive influence he had on his students. For him, being remembered as a good teacher surpassed any other recognition, titles, or accomplishments.

In essence, Dr. APJ Abdul Kalam's quote encapsulates his profound understanding of education as a transformative force. He believed that teachers hold the key to shaping the character, potential, and future of individuals and, by extension, society as a whole. His dedication to the teaching profession and his unyielding commitment to nurturing young minds continue to inspire educators and learners worldwide.
